DAMS THAT ROLL UP OUT OF WATER

Dams that may be rolled up out of streams in order to provide an unobstructed channel for the passage of flood waters are being made to come into favor in the United States.

They were first used in Germany in 1902, and since that date have been adopted extensively in Europe, but American engineers until recently have regarded them with skepticism.

It is significant, therefore, that the United States reclamation service has installed a rolling dam on the Boise irrigation project in Idaho, and others are in course of construction in this country.

These dams, instead of being solid barriers of masonry, are of hollow cylindrical steel shells, each look very much like elongated boilers. Each end is fitted with a gear which engages in an inclined rack, and hoisting machinery is provided so that the dam may be rolled up on its inclined guides clear of the stream. Of course the rolling type of dam is not suitable under conditions which call for a very high structure to impound water.--Engineering Record.

THE ANNUAL TOLL OF HUNTERS

One hundred and thirty hunters killed 12 injured and not dead, in the open game season's toll, according to the record of casualties kept by the Chicago Tribune. The slain are divided between seventeen states and Alaska, the others between nine states.

Wisconsin is the chief offender, with twenty-nine deaths and twenty-eight injuries, while Michigan followed with a very fair second, Minnesota and North Dakota running a tight race for third.

Nebraska does not appear of the lists at all. Of course, some hunters must have been injured and perhaps slain this autumn in Nebraska, but if so, the records are not included in this compilation.

But what a fearful toll of life for so brief a period. It challenges attention of a people so quick to cry out against all manner of casualties due to preventable causes, such, for example, as railroad, mine and automobile accidents. But there is still another point worthy of mention. How little attention, comparatively, is attracted by such heavy casualties when they happen to be from purely private causes and confined to private circles. It is so with automobile accidents. Relatively they, as hunters' mishaps, excite almost no general comment, but what if the same number of deaths and injuries occurred in a railroad accident or a mine? Instantly a clamor for better means of prevention would arise, and justly so. As to the others, especially the hunters, we are apt to sigh and lay it on to certain natural habits of carelessness, difficult, if not impossible, to combat. No more than with respect to public accidents, we ought to be as alert to correct our own private individual faults as we insist on the correction of those of public agencies.--Omaha Bee.

HIS WIFE'S "LITTLE" PARTY

Brother Smudge Tells of Proceedings That Followed Reunion of Former Spouses and Their Children.

"What was dem pulesed'n's up at yo'-all's residence last night, sah?" inquired Brother Yockey. "Noise and gwine-on twell it sounded like a camp-meetin', mighty loud, and--"

"Twus'n't nuth'n' special, sah; duss a little reception da muh wife got up," replied Brother Smudge. "She 'vited her fust husband, and de second gen'leman she was divoiced fum, and would'n 'vited her third husband, on'y he is in de penitentiary at de present, and deir wives, and muh fust, third and fourth he'pmeets--de second lady I was mar'd to is done dead--and deir children, and dar was right snabit of a 'semblage, sah. Uh-well, put soon dey got to rakin' up old times all 'round, and turreted de fightin' begun. Dey busted up considerable o' de furniture to make clubs to beat each other wid, and part o' de floor broke down and some o' 'em fell 'thoo de hole and went on fightin' under de house, and somehow or nudder dey eddied got afiah, and I reggin' 'twould'n burnt plumb up if de constable hadn't u-bcome wid a gang o' white men and 'rested everybody but me."

"And you calls dat nuth'n' special, sah?"

"Nope! 'Twus on'y what mought uh-been expected wid dat sawth folks herded together in one house."

"H'm, mebbey! But how-come dat yo' wasn't 'rested, too?"

"I wasn't dar, sah. I didn't 'cept de lady's invitation."

SEEKS KEY TO POPULARITY

Man Much Sought After by Book Agents and Solicitors Wonders Why Elite Scorn Him.

"I don't know what's the matter with me!" grumbled the Old Coder. "By people of worth and substance--busy, clean, representative folks whose good opinions I really feel I ought to possess--I am regarded as more or less of a kicker, back-puller, grouchy and mossback; and by some few, I believe, as an object of suspicion. But, on the other hand, I never fail to make a favorable impression on, and an immediate hit with, every blamed bore, agent, solicitor, hum politician and other nuisance that happens into my vicinity. Auger-eyed gentlemen with schemes, oily ones with encyclopedias, somber ones with town lots in the middle of Dismal Swamp, apocryphal friends of my boyhood, up-getters of funds for the preservation of historic huts and the smel-oration of far-flung hearthen, and dead-beats and lame ducks of all kinds, come miles and fairly fall over each other to get to me. What in fire is the matter with me, anyhow?"

NO OLD MAIDS IN SIAM

When Girls Reach Certain Age Without Getting Married the King Procures a Spouse.

Kings of Siam apparently do not believe in the wisdom of allowing single women to drift unattached about the country. In certain districts after a girl has reached an age where her securing for herself a husband is considered doubtful she becomes a "daughter of the king." That is, the king takes upon himself the task of settling her suitably in life.

His process is quite simple and to the point. He proceeds to the Siamese penitentiary and looks over the various prisoners. There is a law in Siam that any prisoner can obtain his release by marrying one of this class of girls, and naturally enough any prisoner whom the king picks out is not likely to be backward about consenting to the ceremony. Nor does it make any difference if he is married, for the men of that country are not restricted to one wife.

As far as can be learned, there is no allowance made for the inclination of the girl in question. She has failed in her mission in life as far as she herself is concerned, and she must abide by the decision of the king.

Utilization of Waste Cork.

Waste cork is used for a variety of purposes. Life buoys are filled with scraps of cork; linoleum, a variety of floor-cloth, is made from linseed oil and pulverized cork paper, a material used for packing bottles, is made by coating strong paper with an adhesive mixture and sprinkling powdered cork over it; cork is sometimes used in place of wood shavings in the preparation of vinegar, and illuminating gas has been made from cork waste by distillation in a retort.

Real Staff of Life.

Bread is the Spanish workman's staff of life and the average daily consumption is estimated at a pound per head.
